Introduction

The Directory

This Directory is a biennial publication aims to present textual and statistical information about public libraries in Sarawak. It identifies the categories of the public libraries, where they are located, the sizes of the collections, staff strength, and the services rendered to users. The directory also explains the administrative set up of public libraries in Sarawak. It is full of facts and figures that we hope the reader will find both informative and stimulating.

Entries in this Directory are arranged by the administrative Division in which the libraries are located. In each Divisional entry, information about the main library comes first, followed by the subsidiary libraries in alphabetical order, and by mobile libraries, where applicable.

Sarawak

Sarawak is one of the thirteen states in Malaysia. It is situated on the island of Borneo – the third largest island in the world – bordering the Malaysian state of Sabah to the northeast and Indonesia to the south. Known as the "Land of the Hornbills" or Bumi Kenyalang in Malay, it is the largest state in Malaysia.

With an area of 124,450 sq. km, Sarawak is internationally famed for its extraordinary natural wonders. Its rich cultural treasures are tremendously fascinating, reflecting the great influence of its many ethnic groups. About 28 ethnic groups make up Sarawak's population of 2.4 million people and each of these groups has its own language, traditions and way of life.

How Public Libraries Operate In Sarawak

People using their local libraries in a village, town or city, are naturally most interested in what the libraries contain, how the library staff can help them and what computer equipment they can use. They are probably unaware of the different authorities, federal, state and local, which have worked together to create state-wide library services for people to use and enjoy. In this section of the Directory we shall learn about who currently does what to provide public library and information services across the length and breadth of Sarawak. There are also some facts and figures about Sarawak's public libraries and an outline of the services which they offer.

The roles of the Federal Government of Malaysia

At the Federal Government of Malaysia's (Federal)'s level, funding for a number of public library programmes has been made available to the Sarawak State Government for many years through the National Library of Malaysia (NLM). One of the NLM's roles is to ensure that a nationwide system of libraries which meet national standards is available to the public. In 2005 the Federal via NLM set up five Special Project (SP) village libraries in Sarawak. In 2007, eleven more were constructed and in 2012, one was successfully set up under the same programme. Under another initiative and as part of the Eighth Malaysia Plan, eleven village libraries with advanced information and communications technology (ICT) facilities were established under the Perpustakaan Desa Siber Ilmu (PDSI) programme.

In a separate initiative extending through a number of phases, over a hundred village libraries benefited from enhanced ICT facilities under the Universal Service Provision (USP) programme financed by the Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications of Malaysia and the Malaysian Communications and Multimedia Commission.

Federal funding has also made possible the commissioning of a number of mobile libraries, serving outlying areas with too small or scattered a population to justify a permanent library building. Day to day management of the standard mobile libraries and mobile multimedia libraries is in the hands of the Ministry of Environment and Public Health of Sarawak and Pustaka Negeri Sarawak respectively, with the cooperation of local authorities.

Sarawak State Government Initiatives

At the Sarawak State Government (State) level, involvement with public libraries occurs under several legislative provisions. Pustaka Negeri Sarawak (Pustaka), the State Library in Kuching, and its regional branch, Pustaka Miri, come within the ambit of the Sarawak Chief Minister's Department. Pustaka operates under the Sarawak State Library Ordinance, 1999 and the Sarawak State Library Ordinance (Amendment) 2009).

The role of Pustaka is to provide timely, accurate, relevant and accessible information in different formats, the essential ingredients for the healthy economic and social development of a State and its citizens. This library is charged with developing and contributing to relevant bibliographic databases, with particular reference to materials published within Sarawak. It is developing as the hub of information services in Sarawak and participates in national and international networks of libraries and information services. In its premises it aims to provide an educational environment, with programmes and exhibitions to increase awareness of the importance and potential of information services and to teach information and research skills.

As well as its in-house and electronic operations, Pustaka also has responsibility for thirty six Special Project (SP) village libraries established with the Federal operational funds and two mobile multimedia libraries called e-Pustaka, based in Kuching and Lawas.

In addition, this Library Division purchases, processes and provides bulk loans of books to the local authority public libraries within its jurisdiction. It also monitors the operations of these libraries and offers advice on planning and development when required.

In addition to providing direct services to its members, Pustaka also contributes to the development of public libraries across the Sarawak. There are responsibilities for preparing standards and guidelines for public library services. Experienced staff provide advices and assistance to colleagues in city, town and village libraries. The sharing of access to electronic and printed library resources is encouraged and facilitated by electronic initiatives, including electronic information available through the Pustaka's website. Support is given for promotional and outreach activities, including assistance with information literacy programmes. Specialised training is provided for staff of public libraries run by local authorities.

Staff of Pustaka also act as advocates for projects to upgrade and develop public libraries, which involves making submissions to and negotiating with the Federal agencies including the NLM and the Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications of Malaysia. Pustaka is subsequently involved in ensuring that financial requirements are met for the purposes of reimbursement of project funds by the Federal. The efforts made by Pustaka have borne fruit in the years since its establishment, with a significant number of new and upgraded town and village libraries, as well as other programmes benefiting from Federal funding.

Among other core functions of Pustaka is the role of a 'State Depository'. Under the Sarawak State Library Ordinance, 1999 and the Sarawak State Library Ordinance (Amendment), 2009, publishers must provide copies of items first published in Sarawak to the Pustaka, facilitating the building of a significant collection relating to Sarawak's heritage. In addition, Pustaka has an important role in the preservation of the manuscript and archival heritage of Sarawak. It offers advisory services on archives and records management to the State departments and instrumentalities. In many instances, Pustaka is providing accommodation for significant heritage archives, arranging their organisation and description along international archival principles and ensuring the optimum physical conditions for their preservation.

Also at a State level is the Library Division of the Ministry of Environment and Public Health of Sarawak, which is responsible for seventeen village libraries and seven mobile libraries. The village libraries are operated in cooperation with local authorities. The mobile services, which provide a range of printed resources, are based at Kuching, Samarahan, Sri Aman, Sarikei, Sibu, Mukah and Miri. The mobile libraries operate in areas where the populations are too scattered or too small to justify permanent library buildings.

In addition, this Library Division purchases, processes and provides bulk loans of books to the local authority public libraries within its jurisdiction. It also monitors the operations of these libraries and offers advice on planning and development when required.

The Local Authorities

At the local government level, public libraries are generally managed by the local authorities, which may be a city, municipal or district councils. These local authorities operate under several Ordinances. The Local Authorities Ordinance, 1996 makes it compulsory for the twenty four local authorities under the MLGCD and one local authority under the Sarawak Chief Minister's Department to provide library services in their areas of jurisdiction.

The Commission of the City of Kuching North or Dewan Bandaraya Kuching Utara (DBKU) operates a city library and eleven community libraries under the Commission of the City of Kuching North Ordinance, 1988, while the Bintulu Development Authority (BDA) operates a main library and three branch libraries under the Bintulu Development Authority Ordinance, 1978. In most cases there is a main or central library, sometimes with district libraries or branches around an urban area, and often with an extensive number of village libraries.

What Public Libraries Do

Although the dominant purpose of public libraries is to provide lending and information services for their local communities, their role is broadening to embrace a social as well as educational function. Libraries are becoming the hubs of their communities. They are places where people are free to come and go, to interact with their fellow citizens, or to join in group discussions or events. Public libraries are for people of all ages, of all backgrounds and of all degrees of academic attainment. There really is something for everyone at the library.

Collections of books, sets of magazines and newspapers, important government reports and other printed materials are the bread and butter of library operations. 'Circulation' – the library jargon for loans of books and other items – is still a very important part of any public library operation.

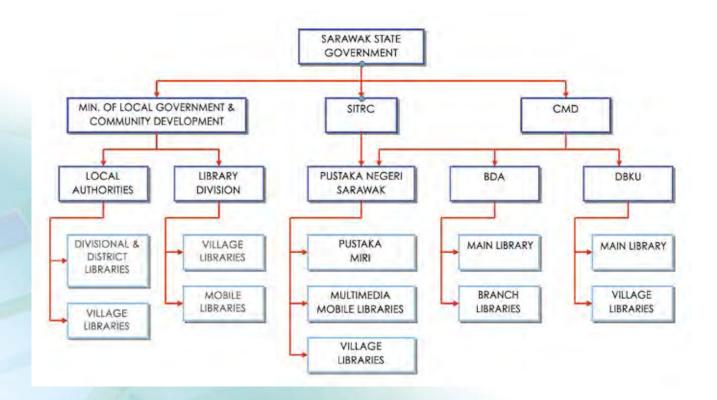

Behind the scenes, skilled library staff are selecting items for particular libraries from the mass of material churned out by the world's printing presses, and organising them so that users can find them. Library staff are making sure that as far as possible they are stocking their shelves with the resources from which their users will gain most benefit. They are selecting items in the key languages of education, business, commerce and day to day communication. They may be making some resources highly 'visible' through online catalogues. They are trying to add to their collections items which reflect a diversity of opinions, the state of knowledge of a particular subject at the time or the heritage and character of a place or an age. In the workplace, from a modest village library to a state of the art information centre, the library staff use their skills to bring their customers and their library resources together, to help them find the right book, journal article or electronic resource for their needs, or the right piece of information, or the right approach to take to research a topic.

Increasingly information is 'packaged', not in print form, but in an electronic medium – a disk to place in a local machine or a remote data bank to be accessed through a computer. The same helpful guidance is available from library staff, irrespective of formats. Often the full text of an item held elsewhere can be rapidly obtained.

On other occasions, items can be borrowed by one library from another - the inter-library loan network at work. No single library can operate in isolation and hope to collect everything which its users might need, so resource sharing is necessary, facilitated by electronic links between libraries.

Of course print-based activities are still very important, and storytelling and other activities based on reading such as book clubs, are very popular. As international research has shown, up to date and relevant collections are as important as attractive library buildings and well-trained library staff in promoting the use of libraries by the community.
