Introduction

Introduction

The purpose to publish the Directory of Public Libraries in Sarawak is to lead users to vital resources for education, commerce, recreation and cultural development by providing information on library resources, staffing and services. This Directory therefore identifies where libraries are, what services and collections they contain, and how and when they may be accessed. By increasing awareness of libraries, this work facilitates their role in defending and promoting democratic participation and freedom of speech, and in ensuring equitable access to information. The Directory also highlights the spread of information and communications technology (ICT) equipment for public access within libraries.

For library professionals the Directory provides comparative information to assist the development and promotion of public libraries as well as promoting co-operation and communication between libraries and their communities, including educational institutions, commerce, industry and health and environmental bodies. It draws attention to library initiatives in adult education and strategies for target audiences, such as people with disabilities, women and young people. For library managers the Directory may help assess how their libraries are performing by showing key performance indicators to enable benchmarking. Finally the illustrations of interiors and exteriors show some examples of public library design.

It is hoped that this publication will help foster networking and cooperation between public libraries and educational institutions, special libraries and other organizations.

This edition provides an introduction to the State, city, town and village libraries across the whole of Sarawak, as well as the mobile libraries that serve communities in over 250 suburban, rural and remote localities. It outlines the functions of public libraries large and small and the resources and services available from your local library and from Pustaka Negeri Sarawak and its regional operation, Pustaka Miri.

This Directory also describes how libraries have developed in Sarawak and how the library system is organized and administered today. It is full of facts and figures that we hope the reader will find both informative and stimulating.

In the Directory section, entries are arranged by the administrative Division in which the libraries are located. In each Divisional entry the main library comes first, followed by the subsidiary libraries in alphabetical order, followed by mobile library information where applicable.

The Directory is based on information provided by the senior staff of the libraries concerned, who also made available photographs of their libraries. The Directory will be updated periodically and new information; corrections and comments are always welcome.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARIES

How Public Libraries Have Developed In Sarawak

How public libraries have developed in Sarawak

by Dr. David J. Jones MA(Oxon), Dip Lib PhD (unsw), AALIA

Rich traditions

The largest State of Malaysia, Sarawak has a colorful history, much of which is still not recorded in print. The written record is relatively scant, and much painstaking work awaits the historian. For indigenous cultures the record was primarily oral and visual, not written. Tales were handed down from one generation to the next. They were told in the longhouse or around the campfire. Tales of heroic exploits, of myths and legends, of superstition. Iban 'folk tales, dances, even epics were half-narrated, half-sung on the longhouse verandahs at night'. (Bullis 1996, 45) In the Malay community legends and romantic tales were told by 'reciters' who were celebrated in their community for their ability to bring their stories alive in the imaginations of their listeners. (Brooke 1913, 157) For Muslims readers and listeners alike shared the special significance of the Koran. Naturally for Muslims there was a long written tradition. (Bullis 1996, 54)

In many ways the oral traditions may have suffered over the years from the appeal of more technological forms of communication and entertainment. Ironically new technology is keeping alive some of the traditions and collective knowledge, through oral history programmes, digital recordings, electronic mail and the Internet. These in turn will form part of the historical resource upon which future historians will rely and which will gradually become available to a wider audience than the most inventive reciters could ever have imagined.

The Brookes and their Books

The first major influx of printed material to Sarawak came in the 1840s with James Brooke, the first Rajah, and the European officers in his employ. Reading was a popular pastime among the colonial officers, and they exchanged books and passed on rather stale issues of the Times when they periodically reported back to Kuching. (Ward 1966, 38)

Missionaries brought reading matter of a different description: Bibles, prayer books and tracts. When she arrived in 1848, Harriette, wife of the Anglican mission priest (and later Bishop) Francis McDougall, came armed with a dictionary to help her converse with at least some of the local population.

James Brooke's first residence boasted a substantial library. (Ho 1998, 11) 'When ships came in', one source relates, 'there were usually some boxes of books for him, and then he would close himself up in his library and read far into the night.' (Payne, 1986: 68) When a more substantial house replaced the bungalow, an even larger room was needed for the library, which by that time covered a wide range of subjects. The Rajah allowed members of the English community in Kuching to borrow from it. Harriette McDougall described the Rajah's library as 'a treasure indeed in the jungle; books on all sorts of subjects, bound in enticing covers, always inviting you to bodily repose and mental activity or amusement, as you might prefer. This library, so dear to us all because we were all allowed to share it.' (McDougall 1882, 17).

We can now only imagine the library and its contents, for it fell victim to arsonists during the 1857 insurrection. Harriette McDougall witnessed its demise from the Mission House on the other side of the Sarawak river. 'It took two days to burn. I watched it from our library over the water, and saw the mass of books glowing dull red like a furnace, long after the flames had consumed the wooden house. It made one's heart ache to see it.' (McDougall 1882, 17)

The Mission House library

Mrs McDougall's vantage point when she witnessed the demise of James Brooke's library was a room in the first Mission House, which had its own library. (McDougall 1882, 30) Now known as the Bishop's House, this is Kuching's oldest surviving building, but much renovated over the years. It also had a print room with an asphalt floor to keep white ants at bay. Here the Bishop set up a printing press in order to print schoolbooks and Dayak translations of the Gospels. (Saint 1992, 130, 146) The translation of religious works into indigenous languages has continued, right down to the present. The first-ever Catholic catechism in the Bidayuh Bukar-Sadong language was published in 1999. (Lim, 1999) Such works are now seen as having the twofold effect of informing those who follow that faith, and of maintaining the relevance of indigenous languages.

French novels and local customs

In 1870 a new residence was built for the Rajah, and was the first part of the present Astana (or palace). It was the first substantial brick building constructed in Kuching. (Ho 1998, 28) It too had a library, with books which the Rajah had purchased, and many items donated by some of his old school and college chums who had heard about the fate of his original collection. (Chater 1994, 21)

Charles Brooke, who became Rajah in 1868, was also very fond of reading. He particularly enjoyed French novels, which he sometimes read aloud to himself or to his French valet. (Payne 1960, 128) During his long reign much more serious work was done on botany, ethnography, anthropology. His officers were encouraged to take an interest in the manners and customs of the peoples of Sarawak, and in wildlife and the natural environment. Notable among them was Charles Hose, Resident of the Third Division, who published a major two-volume work covering every imaginable aspect of Borneo and its peoples. Another Resident, D. J. S. Bailey compiled the first Iban dictionary, whilst C. A. Bampfylde collaborated with Sabine Baring-Gould on a history of Sarawak. Many others contributed articles on local customs, linguistics, wildlife and ecology to journals such as the Sarawak Gazette. (Crisswell 1978, 121-122)

The Sarawak Gazette

The Government Printing Office was established in 1870, and one of its first publications was the Sarawak Gazette, a pet project of Charles Brooke. It is now an essential source of historical information on Sarawak affairs. It contains source material on economic history, coastal trade returns, commodity prices, agricultural information, mineral and oil production statistics, anthropology and archaeology. (Loh 1993)

A Subscription Library

In the days of Rajah James and Rajah Charles there was little awareness of the need for wider availability of printed materials for the general public - in fact literacy among the Sarawak population was not high. In the early 1870s a private subscription library did start up. The Sarawak Library and Reading Room, as it was known, was open only to people able to afford the entrance fee and to be approved as members.

It followed the pattern of private subscription libraries in the English-speaking world in the nineteenth century, generally serving 'gentlemen' with English and American books and magazines, and trying to survive on their subscriptions, on income from hiring out rooms and more often than not on a government subsidy.

Library provision by the government was not then a high priority, although in the early days of the twentieth century the need for books was beginning to be felt keenly in schools and in the literate community. Local book production was modest, although examples survive from as early as the 1870s. The earliest surviving book edited, printed and published in Kuching is Waiting for the tide: or, scraps and scrawls from Sarawak written by W. M. Crocker and others and published in 1875. A Chinese man who had been educated at the Mission School, perhaps helping Bishop McDougall with his press, printed it. This work has now been digitized and can be seen on the Pustaka Negeri Sarawak website.

New books arriving in Sarawak were such an event that they were listed in the Sarawak Gazette. (Payne 1960, 166) Even if the need for library services had been acknowledged, there were certainly huge logistical problems: Sarawak's size - 124,800 square kilometres - and widespread population - with five thousand rural settlements - were distinct handicaps for state-wide library development.

The Sarawak Museum

In other respects Kuching itself was well provided with facilities, at least for its wealthy and expatriate community. By the turn of the twentieth century it had a population of twenty thousand and could boast a golf course, social clubs and racecourses. There were also mosques, temples, churches and schools of different denominations. And during this period there flourished a jewel in the cultural and scientific crown of Sarawak: its Museum, the brainchild of Charles Brooke.

The Sarawak Museum now has superb collections of ethnographic materials, arts and crafts, natural history and exhibitions of Sarawak's history and prehistory. For many years the Museum was the State's foremost institution of higher learning because of the range of research projects which it conducted or supported. Since 1911 it has published the Sarawak Museum Journal, a highly respected international journal of Borneo research.

Today the Museum also plays an important role in protecting Sarawak's heritage, having jurisdiction in the export of antiques and the protection of significant sites such as the Niah Caves and the Satang Island Turtle Sanctuary.

The British Council

A public reading room, initially used mainly by the European population, was a feature of the Museum in the 1920s and 1930s, but like the rest of the Museum, it was neglected during the difficult years of the Depression and suffered further during World War II. The reading room was revived and became known as the Sarawak Library after the War. It was subsequently adopted by the British Council, which breathed new life into its services and collections, and it became familiar to Kuching's keen readers, particularly in the 1950s and 1960s. In those decades educational opportunities for indigenous Sarawakians began to improve, and for the most talented studying at the library was a prelude to higher studies at Commonwealth universities. The British Council extended its services beyond Kuching, opening a library in Sibu and lending boxes of books to schools and specially selected materials to teachers across the State.

Sarawak Government Library (the working library of the Museum)

In the meantime the working library of the Museum, sometimes referred to in the colonial period as the Sarawak Government Library, had also suffered losses during the War, but efforts were made to replace missing volumes and to reorganise it. In 1950 an archives section was established, and its reference collections on Borneo and South-east Asian area were bolstered by ensuring that material printed and published in Sarawak was deposited for preservation under the Printers and Publishers Ordinance, 1950. This would be extended in succeeding decades by the Local Newspapers Ordinance, 1958, the Sarawak Museum (Deposit Library) Ordinance, 1961, and the federal Preservation of Books Act in 1966.

In this way the Museum collection became for many years the de facto state library collection, holding major archival resources from the Brooke era, the Sarawak Gazette and Sarawak Government Gazette, as well as closed files and records of various state and local government bodies, and reference works on Borneo and the region. (Chin et al 1983, 8)

A public library scheme

In 1955 the colonial authorities approved funds to establish libraries throughout Sarawak, though due to the spread of the population and the remoteness of many settlements progress was very slow - even today some remote libraries can only be reached by helicopter, and many are cut off by land or by water during periods of exceptionally high or conversely low rainfall. (Sarawak Annual Report 1955 p 75) The British Council was actively involved in library development, and the private sector was also supportive. In the 1950s and early 1960s Shell presented its 'Shell Longhouse Libraries', small collections of popular works in simplified English, to many villages in Sarawak. In 1962 the Carnegie Corporation of New York donated a collection of 350 works to the Sarawak Central Library, as it was then known. (Sarawak Annual Report 1957, p. 70 and 1960, p 95)

By the end of the colonial period, the Sarawak Central Library contained more than 35,000 volumes in English, Chinese and Malay. There were local libraries in Miri, Sibu and Simanggang (now Sri Aman). The central library also supplied books on bulk loan to 25 other service points. The British Council was also active, lending films, books and mounting exhibitions. (Sarawak Annual Report, 1961, p. 93; Kueh 1998a, p. 4)

Libraries after Federation

With the entry of Sarawak into the Federation of Malaysia in 1963 responsibility for education passed to the Federal Government, and libraries became the responsibility at the State level of the Sarawak Ministry of Local Government (later known as the Ministry of Environment and Tourism and now the Ministry of Environment and Public Health (Kementerian Alam Sekitar dan Kesihatan Awam or KASKA for short)). (Kueh 1994a, 4) Development of library services continued. Kuching Municipal Council began to operate its own library service in Jalan P. Ramlee, next door to the Sarawak State Library (Perpustakaan Negeri Sarawak), which had changed its name from Sarawak Library in 1970. The Kuching Municipal Council library was itself handed over to Kuching North City Hall (Dewan Bandaraya Kuching Utara or DBKU for short) when the municipal authorities were restructured in 1989.

By the late 1980s and early 1990s there was growing recognition that if they were strengthened, public libraries could contribute even more to the educational, economic and social development of the State.

In little more than ten years library membership across the State had more than doubled. Between 1982 and 1992 the number of books lent almost tripled from 800,000 to 2.3 million.

The Parker Report

In 1990 a consultant, Stephen J. Parker, was engaged to study and review the public library framework and development in Sarawak. He reported difficulties in meeting demand for library materials, especially in rural areas, and a lack of resources in Bahasa Malaysia. He noted that only twelve of the 235 non-manual staff working in libraries had professional qualifications. He recommended bigger collections, a new State Library headquarters, major regional libraries and more libraries throughout the State. (Parker 1990)

Expert follow-up

In 1994 a Technical Working Group was formed by the Sarawak Ministry of Environment and Tourism, under which the Sarawak State Library then operated. Its report, prepared by the then Sarawak State Librarian, Johnny Kueh, also highlighted the disparities between urban and rural library provision, and described shortcomings in the information infrastructure. Lack of coordination was a contributory factor, as responsibilities for various library sectors were fragmented. The Federal government was responsible for school libraries; individual institutions for university and college libraries; certain local authorities for some public libraries; State and Federal instrumentalities for their own departmental libraries; and the private sector for private libraries. The Ministry itself was responsible for the State Library, for grants for local library buildings, for bulk loan collections, for basic library training, for postal lending to individuals in remote areas, for mobile library services and for many village library services where the local authorities lacked the resources to establish them. (Kueh, 1994b)

It was true that every district in the State had at least one urban service point, but there were ten districts which still did not have any rural service points at all. Lending was widespread, but more advanced library services, such as reference and research services, were non-existent except in the major centres where the limited numbers of professional staff were concentrated. (Kueh 1994b)

Rural services

In semi-rural areas served by good roads, the State Library had introduced mobile libraries in 1990, with funding assistance from the Federal Government. The first mobile library served Kuching's outlying suburbs, and was soon followed by mobile libraries based in Sarikei, Sri Aman, Sibu, Miri and Samarahan, all operating within a radius of fifty kilometres from their urban library bases. More village libraries had also been set up to respond to the reading needs of rural folk. Village libraries were a collaborative effort between the State Library, local authorities and village library committees. The State Library gave technical advice on the setting up and running of village libraries, lent library materials in bulk at regular intervals, and trained attendants. The local council paid for the maintenance of buildings, furniture, magazines and newspapers, and the attendants' allowances. For its part, the village library committee (usually the village headman, the school principal and some village elders) provided a suitable building free of charge and was responsible for the day to day running of the library.

End of an era

The British Council library, which had provided excellent service to keen students and scholars in Kuching for many years, was scaled down in 1996. This was part of a worldwide British Council move to support thriving local public libraries and to focus its own reference and information services in Kuching on information relating to Great Britain. Some of the former British Council collections were handed to the local authorities in North and South Kuching, with some specialised resources going to the Medical Services Department and the Sarawak Development Institute.

Library Division, Ministry of Environment and Public Health (KASKA)

As well as its Kuching operations in Jalan P. Ramlee and the Civic Centre, in the 1990s the Library Division of KASKA was staffing mobile library services, providing bulk loans to public libraries outside Kuching, and staffing some village libraries. It also reached out to the community in a number of other ways, promoting reading and stimulating library use through a number of well-publicised programmes. These included awards for outstanding village libraries, a Braille Reading Competition (in conjunction with the Sarawak Association for the Blind) and an annual fact-finding competition, with questions set by the Library and answers to be found in works held in libraries.

There were regular seminars, talks and lectures for staff, mathematics quizzes, physics competitions, exhibitions of works by Sarawakian authors, reading and storytelling competitions. All these helped to keep the Library in the public eye.

In 30th September 2011, KASKA was renamed Ministry of Local Government and Community Development.

Information technology developments

The Library began its automation programme in 1995, providing technical staff with access to shared cataloguing data and reference staff with access to international bibliographic databases. Progress was been aided by the inception of Jaring (Jaringan Ilmu or Knowledge Network) in 1994, pioneered by the National Library of Malaysia and the Malaysian Institute of Microelectronic Systems (MIMOS). (Shukor, 1994; Wira Abadi, 1996) The official home page of the Library Division, and its Internet services were launched in December 1997.

Foundations for progress

In numerical terms the progress made in the last two decades of the twentieth century was remarkable. In 1980 there were no mobile libraries - by 1999 there were six. There were eleven village libraries in 1980, compared with 145 in 1999. The twenty public, State and council libraries in 1980 had grown to fifty in 1999. Items borrowed from public libraries increased sevenfold between 1980 and 1998, and library membership had increased likewise. In a short span libraries had come a long way. But the time had come for even the big steps of the 1990s to be transformed into a giant leap. A new century and a new millennium would demand much more access to information.

A giant leap

On the night of 31 December 1999, a huge crowd of citizens and invited guests, and via the electronic media a state-wide audience, were enjoying a spectacular introduction to the New Year on a landscaped site at Petra Jaya, just north of the Sarawak River at Kuching. The dawn of the new millennium was marked by the opening of a state of the art state library and information technology centre, representing a new benchmark in library services for the people of Sarawak. This library, established under the Sarawak State Library Ordinance, 1999, has the official title of Sarawak State Library or its equivalent in Bahasa Malaysia - Pustaka Negeri Sarawak.

The philosophical foundation of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak was eloquently expressed in the words: 'A knowledge and information-based society needs a forum for intellectual exchange among its people, a centre of enlightenment where minds can meet and ideas interact, and access to information, knowledge, technologies and cultures available beyond the superficial boundaries imposed by geography.' This is a holistic vision of the role of the public library in society, which in the case of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak has been honed to the broad but succinct vision: 'To be the reservoir and fountain of information and knowledge to the State'.

Translated into more concrete terms, this meant providing state of the art facilities for easy and real time access to information and knowledge with the objective of creating an excellent resource centre and information hub for the region. The new facility was intended to be inclusive, ensuring that all individuals in the State have ready and easy access to information and knowledge.

Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is thus conceived as a major information resource centre and as the hub of information services for the public and private sectors. It is intended to link with libraries, archives and information centres elsewhere in Sarawak and throughout Malaysia. It also provides a gateway into and from publicly accessible international information centres. Its complex is intended to serve as a community centre of knowledge and cultural enlightenment, where Malaysians in Sarawak can not only access a vast store of information in the form of printed and electronic media, but also gather for educational and cultural exchanges, programmes and to participate in many other regular activities.

Set within a park, which includes the State Mosque and the Minaret Gardens on the western side, Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is a place of learning and reflection. Within its evocative exterior lies a library of the 21st century, a perfect marriage of the 'frozen music' of architecture and the marvels of information technology. Its landscaped surroundings provide a timeless link to nature and the environment of Sarawak. Around the lake cluster areas for public performances, picnics, space for children to play, a scenic drive, walkways and bicycle lanes surrounded by trees, shrubs and flower gardens.

More than six years of detailed planning and careful construction went into this remarkable project. The new 13,000 square metre facilities set in a landscaped park and fronting an artificial lake, were officially opened by the Chief Minister, YAB Pehin Sri Haji Abdul Taib Mahmud. It was fitting that the Chief Minister should perform this ceremony, as he had been a most enthusiastic supporter of the new library project ever since it had first been proposed.

Equally fittingly, it was the former State Secretary, Tan Sri Haji Hamid Bugo who had accepted the new role of Chairman of the Board of Management of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak: as State Secretary he had done much to initiate official action on the new project and took a very close interest in every detail of the planning and design of the new facility.

A third key figure in the project was also there that night: YB Datu Wilson Baya Dandot, the former State Secretary, who first as Director of the State Planning Unit and then as Deputy State Secretary, had been very active during the planning, design and construction stages.

Under the guidance of its Chief Executive Officer, Puan Rashidah Haji Bolhassan and an enthusiastic staff, Pustaka Negeri Sarawak has become a true 'fountain of knowledge'. This phrase has captured the imagination and is still widely applied to this very popular building. Its realisation was of course the result of a massive team effort. It was a landmark, not just in physical terms, but also as a demonstration of library design principles, of cooperation across sectors – federal, state and local authority – and of innovative services and facilities. A detailed account of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is provided in Fountain of knowledge, which was published in 1999.

Further progress

Progress in library development was by no means limited to the State capital. As the new state library progressively became operational, electronic services made possible by the pioneering work of Sarawak Information Services (SAINS), steadily reached into more and more distant parts of the State. New libraries sprang up in villages and small towns, and in several localities brand new buildings were constructed to replace older libraries which we no longer able to cope with public demand. In 2002 a regional branch of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak was established at Pustaka Miri, catering for the information and research needs of the Miri community and the neighbouring districts and towns of northern Sarawak.

Under the 8th Malaysia Plan (2001-2005) federal funding was allocated for the development of village libraries with information and communications technology (ICT) facilities. The Perpustakaan Desa Siber Ilmu programme benefited eleven communities across Sarawak.

Another federal funding programme was the Universal Service Provision (USP) strategy, which from 2003 provided village libraries with upgraded ICT facilities. This programme was led by the federal Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications and the Malaysia Communication and Multimedia Commission. In 2005 the federal budget provided funding for a national village library programme and Sarawak benefited from five of these 'Special Project' (SP) village libraries.

Meanwhile, the standard mobile libraries providing access to printed materials in sparsely-populated and remote areas were supplemented by e-Pustaka, a new kind of mobile library to help meet the growing need for electronic library services. Two vehicles, based in Kuching and Lawas, have made available multimedia services and an Internet connection to a very wide range of users to whom such services were previously inaccessible.

As at the end of 2006, there were 228 permanent public library buildings in Sarawak, of which 52 were state, central, district or town libraries, and the remaining 176 were village libraries across the length and the breadth of the State. Since the beginning of the new millennium the number of public library buildings has therefore grown by 33, or by approximately 17 per cent. In addition many existing library premises have been updated or extended, and a significant number have been replaced by completely new buildings, better able to meet public demand and to provide the necessary space and infrastructure for electronic equipment and access to state-wide networks. In addition mobile library services have been supplemented by the two e-Pustaka vehicles mentioned earlier

Thoughts were also turning to the localities where river access was more viable than minor roads and tracks, and ideas for boat-libraries were being floated. Meanwhile even the remotest areas, accessible only by air during much of the year, will soon be in a position to take advantage of satellite technology to access some of the electronic services which town dwellers and those using many new village libraries now take for granted.

Needless to say, it is not in the nature of the people of Sarawak to rest on their laurels. There is still much to do in the extension and development of library and information services. The task of constructing new libraries and upgrading existing ones will continue unabated. Collections required to inform, educate and entertain the intellect will continue to grow. Library promotion will continue to drum up new business, publicising what is available, reinforcing the loyalty of current library users and enlisting the support of new generations of library 'champions' in the community, in government and the educational institutions.

Meanwhile the library professionals will continue to respond to the challenges of modern librarianship. They will update their skills. They will need to ensure that staff of the right calibre are recruited into the profession and are provided with the right education in the traditional craft and the new skills needed to meet the information needs of the communities which they will be serving.

As they seek to develop and improve their library services, library managers will also be able to benefit from the experiences of others by making contact with colleagues whose libraries are featured in this publication. By examining the statistical information - in particular the key performance indicators - they can go some way towards benchmarking their own libraries against those in other parts of the State.

Libraries of course do not exist in isolation. They are part of their communities, and their communities are part of them. They depend on the support of their communities and in return libraries support the communities which nourish them. Smart and well-patronised public libraries betoken a smart and well-informed community. Libraries are a golden thread running through the development of an advanced nation: as vital as the DNA which makes up every living thing on this planet. In real libraries of bricks and mortar, and in virtual libraries carried in the ether, we mine the data, we identify the information, and enable our users to gain knowledge and share in the wisdom of the world in ways our parents would never have dreamt of. In the next chapter we shall learn a little of how Sarawak's public libraries, these fountains of knowledge, operate today and what they can offer their users.

How Public Libraries Operate And What They Do

How public libraries operate and what they do

People using their local libraries in a village, town or city, are naturally most interested in what the libraries contain, how the library staff can help them and what computer equipment they can use. They are probably unaware of the different authorities, federal, state and local, which have worked together to create state-wide library services for people to use and enjoy. The previous chapter told how the library system came about and in this chapter we shall learn a little more about who currently does what to provide public library and information services across the length and breadth of Sarawak. There are also some facts and figures about Sarawak's public libraries and an outline of the services which they offer.

Federal Government role

At the federal level, funding for a number of public library programmes has been made available to the State Government for many years through the National Library of Malaysia (Perpustakaan Negara Malaysia). One of the National Library's roles, as required by the National Library Act (Amendments) 1987, Part II Section 4(2)(h), is to ensure that a nationwide system of libraries which meet national standards is available to the public. This is achieved in a number of ways, as mentioned in the previous chapter. The 2005 federal budget, for example, funded a national programme under which five Special Project (SP) village libraries were constructed in Sarawak. Ongoing responsibility for these village libraries now lies with Pustaka Negeri Sarawak. Under another federal initiative, as part of the 8th Malaysia Plan, eleven village libraries with advanced information and communication technology (ICT) facilities were established under the Perpustakaan Desa Siber Ilmu (PDSI) programme.

In a separate initiative extending through a number of phases, just over a hundred village libraries benefited from enhanced ICT facilities under a Universal Service Provision (USP) programme financed by the federal Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications and the Malaysia Communication and Multimedia Commission.

Federal funding has also made possible the commissioning of a number of mobile libraries, serving outlying areas with too small or scattered a population to justify a permanent library building. Day to day management of the standard mobile libraries services and e-Pustaka is in the hands of the Sarawak Ministry of Environment and Public Health and Pustaka Negeri Sarawak respectively, with the cooperation of local councils.

State Government initiatives

At the State level involvement with public libraries occurs under several legislative provisions. Pustaka Negeri Sarawak, the state library in Kuching, and its regional branch Pustaka Miri, come within the ambit of the Chief Minister's Department. Pustaka Negeri Sarawak operates under two Ordinances: the Sarawak Information Technology and Resources Council Ordinance, 1999 and the Sarawak State Library Ordinance of the same year. Under this legislation the Chief Executive Officer, reporting to a Board of Management, is responsible for the headquarters at Pustaka Negeri Sarawak in Kuching and for Pustaka Miri.

The role of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is to provide timely, accurate, relevant and accessible information in different formats, the essential ingredients for the healthy economic and social development of a State and its citizens. This library is charged with developing and contributing to relevant bibliographic databases, with particular reference to materials published within Sarawak. It is developing as the hub of information services in Sarawak and participates in national and international networks of libraries and information services. In its premises it aims to provide an educational environment, with programmes and exhibitions to increase awareness of the importance and potential of information services and to teach information and research skills.

As well as its in-house and electronic operations, Pustaka Negeri Sarawak also has responsibility for twenty-three Special Project (SP) village libraries established with federal operational funds (2005-2006) and two mobile electronic library vehicles, based in Kuching and Lawas, which provide access to the multimedia and Internet to users in more remote parts of these regions.

In addition to providing direct services to its members, Pustaka Negeri Sarawak also contributes to the development of public libraries across the State. There are responsibilities for preparing standards and guidelines for public library services. Experienced staff provide advice and assistance to colleagues in city, town and village libraries. The sharing of access to electronic and printed library resources is encouraged and facilitated by electronic initiatives, including electronic information available through the Pustaka Negeri Sarawak website. Support is given for promotional and outreach activities, including assistance with information literacy programmes. Specialised training is provided for staff from public libraries run by local authorities.

Staff from Pustaka Negeri Sarawak also act as advocates for projects to upgrade and develop public libraries, which involves making submissions to and negotiating with federal agencies including the National Library of Malaysia (Perpustakaan Negara Malaysia) and the Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications (Kementerian Tenaga, Air dan Komunikasi, KTAK). Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is subsequently involved in ensuring that financial requirements are met for the purposes of reimbursement of project funds by the federal government. The efforts made by Pustaka Negeri Sarawak have borne fruit in the years since its establishment, with a significant number of new and upgraded town and village libraries, as well as other programmes benefiting from federal funding.

Among other core functions of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is the role of 'State Depository'. Under Sarawak law publishers must provide copies of items first published in Sarawak to the Library, facilitating the building of a significant collection relating to Sarawak's heritage. In addition Pustaka Negeri Sarawak has an important role in the preservation of the manuscript and archival heritage of the State. It offers advisory services on archives and records management to Sarawak government departments and instrumentalities. In many instances Pustaka Negeri Sarawak is providing accommodation for significant heritage archives, arranging their organisation and description along international archival principles and ensuring the optimum physical conditions for their preservation.

Also at a State level is the Library Division of the Ministry of Environment and Public Health, Sarawak (Kementerian Alam Sekitar dan Kesihatan Awam or KASKA for short), which is based in a building in Jalan P. Ramlee formerly occupied by a previous incarnation of the State Library. This Division is responsible for a junior reference library with a reading room in Kuching as well as 17 village libraries and seven book mobile libraries provided under the 7th Malaysia Plan. The village libraries are operated in cooperation with local authorities. The mobile services, which provide a range of printed resources, are based at Kuching (serving parts of Kuching, Bau and Serian), Samarahan, Sri Aman, Sarikei, Sibul, Mukah and Miri. The mobile libraries operate in areas of the State where populations are too scattered or too small to justify permanent library buildings.

In addition this Division purchases, processes and provides bulk loans of books to the local authority public, mobile and village libraries within its jurisdiction. It also monitors the operations of these libraries and offers advice on planning and development when required.

Local authorities

At the local government level public libraries are generally managed by the local authority, which may be a district, municipal, rural district or city council. Local authorities operate under several ordinances. There are 43 Divisional and District libraries and 149 public and village libraries operating under Section 131(g) (i) of the Local Authority Ordinance, 1997.

Three authorities operate under separate legislation. DBKU operates a city library and eleven community libraries under the Local Authority Ordinance 1996 and the DBKU (Library) By-Laws, 2002. The Bintulu Development Authority (BDA) operates a main library and three branch libraries. MBKS operates a public reference library. In most cases there is a main or central library, sometimes with district libraries or branches around an urban area, and often with an extensive number of village libraries.

A complete table showing all of the public library operations and their administering authorities is provided in Appendix 1. Contact information for local authorities is given in Appendix 2.

What public libraries do

Although the dominant purpose of public libraries is to provide lending and information services for their local communities, their role is broadening to embrace a social as well as educational function. Libraries are becoming the hubs of their communities. They are places where people are free to come and go, to interact with their fellow citizens, or to join in group discussions or events. Public libraries are for people of all ages, of all backgrounds and of all degrees of academic attainment. There really is something for everyone at the library.

Collections of books, sets of magazines and newspapers, important government reports and other printed materials are the bread and butter of library operations. 'Circulation' – the library jargon for loans of books and other items – is still a very important part of any public library operation. Circulation figures are very healthy in Sarawak.

Behind the scenes skilled library staff are selecting items for particular libraries from the mass of material churned out by the world's printing presses, and organising them so that users can find them. Library staff are making sure that as far as possible they are stocking their shelves with the resources from which their users will gain most benefit. They are selecting items in the key languages of education, business, commerce and day to day communication. They may be making some resources highly 'visible' through online catalogues. They are trying to add to their collections items which reflect a diversity of opinions, the state of knowledge of a particular subject at the time or the heritage and character of a place or an age. In the workplace, from a modest village library to a state of the art information centre, the library staff use their skills to bring their customers and their library resources together, to help them find the right book, journal article or electronic resource for their needs, or the right piece of information, or the right approach to take to research a topic.

Increasingly information is 'packaged', not in print form, but in an electronic medium – a disk to place in a local machine or a remote data bank to be accessed through a computer. The same helpful guidance is available from library staff, irrespective of formats. Often the full text of an item held elsewhere can be rapidly obtained.

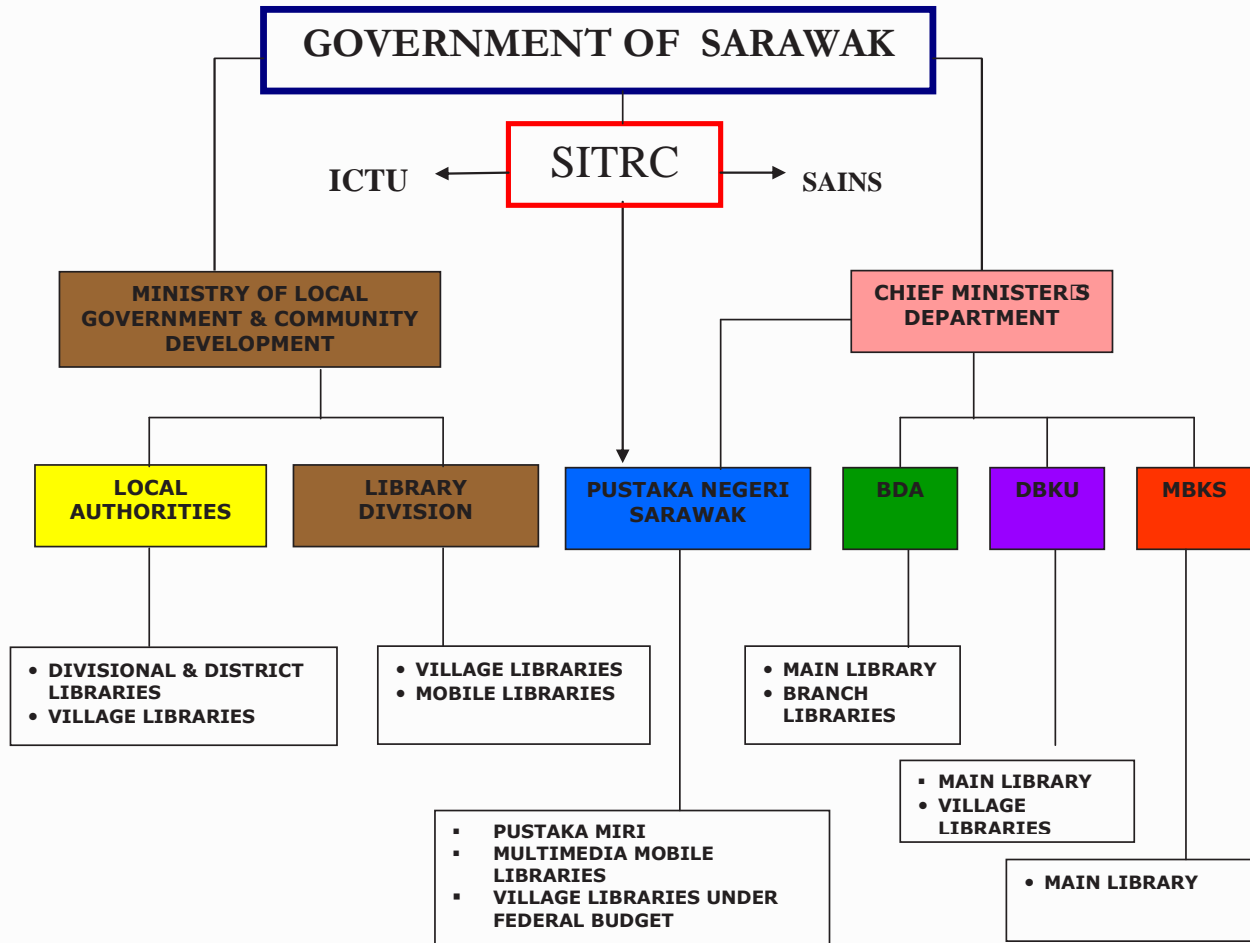

On other occasions items can be borrowed by one library from another – the inter-library loan network at work. No single library can operate in isolation and hope to collect everything which its users might need, so resource sharing is necessary, facilitated by electronic links between libraries.

The following tables illustrate the very heavy demand for access to computers in libraries, shown by the number of bookings and the total of hours during which library clients are using the facilities available. In many cases library staff provide extensive assistance to first-time users, providing formal or informal training in 'information literacy'. Multimedia 'galleries' and children's 'infotheques' bring younger users in particular into contact in an attractive and entertaining way with the information and communications technology which is becoming an increasing part of everyday life and every workplace.

Of course print-based activities are still very important, and storytelling and other activities based on reading such as book clubs, are very popular. As international research has shown, up to date and relevant collections are as important as attractive library buildings and well-trained library staff in promoting the use of libraries by the community.

DBKU City Library

Background History

In 1966 the Sarawak State Government suggested that the Kuching Municipal Council setup a public and a reference library in Kuching. The setting up of Public Library was officiated by the President of Kuching Municipal Council , Cr. Song Thian Cheok , P.B.S. on September 15, 1970.

During that time the area was only about ½ acres and although a grant of RM 50,000.00 was received from the state to facilitate the construction of the library, the costs was amounting to RM 190,000.00 including the furniture, the road & the parking spaces.

In 1989 the Public Library was taken over by the Commission of DBKU in stages. It was reopened to the public after the interior was modified and repainting was done. The Public Library was then officially taken by the Commission on 21st May 1989 with a new face lift, and better facilities and services. In 1990 the Library was fully taken over by the Commission.

The objective of the library is to provide access to knowledge, information and works of thoughts through a range or resources and services and is equally available to all members of the community regardless of race, nationality, age, gender, religion, language, economic and employment status and educational attainment. The library also actively supports literacy campaigns as literacy is the key to education and knowledge and to promote the use of libraries and information services.

In 1995 the Public Library becomes the 1st library in Sarawak that implemented Library Automation using Horizon Library Systems. The upgrade involves not only its lending & borrowing services, but also various other services. The system was used for almost 10 years before the library migrated to ANGKASA Management Library System. Here, this library is connected to the other 14 libraries in various towns and Institutions of Higher Learning all over Sarawak virtually.

Like many other organizations, the Library systems are going through a period of unprecedented and ongoing changes as a result of the rapid development of information technology, including social and demographic changes. This presents tremendous opportunities for the library to act out its primary role as information provider. The Library's Staff are well equipped in order to cater to the community's needs. Various trainings related to library & IT is given to its staff in order to deliver superior and exceptional services to its users and the community. As an information navigator users of all ages are facilitated to utilize the information and communications technology provided along with quality services by the Library as the pillar of knowledge for the society.

Because of its strategic location in the middle of the city, DBKU City library is popularly well utilized by its users and becoming a center for acquisition of knowledge and information.

In Year 2005 the library celebrated its 15th anniversary .Various activities were organized in conjunction with the anniversary.

Lundu District Council

Background History

Lundu Public Library, which is managed by Lundu District Council, began operations in 1978. A major milestone was reached in 2006 when the library occupied the ground floor of a RM1 million new building. The new library has a floor area of 360 square metres and a staff of five. As well as a collection of newspapers, magazines and books for loan, in Bahasa Malaysia, English, Chinese and other languages, the library has Internet access for the public. The computers and communications link were provided under the Universal Service Provision program. Currently open for eight hours per day, five days a week, the library is heavily used, particularly by students. Significant membership growth has been noted since it moved into its new premises. In 2006 there were over 25,000 visitors, borrowing over 28,000 items and making over 600 Internet bookings.

The Lundu District Council is also responsible for libraries in Sematan and a number of villages. The branch library at Sematan was established in 1991 and now occupies a 162 square metre building. It is open for eight hours per day, five days a week and has two staff. Typical of the village libraries is that at Telok Melano, which began operations in 1995 in a building constructed by the Council on land owned by the local community. Today the residents of this and nearby villages can benefit from the solar-powered Internet service. A telephone is also available for community use. There is one staff member and the library is open four hours per day, five days a week. There are village libraries with similar facilities, opening hours and administrative arrangements at Biawak, which opened in 2004, Bokah (1996), Pueh (1994), Sampadi (1994) and Sebako (1996).

Serian District Council Library

Background History

Serian District Council Library can trace its origins to the early 1960s, when a reading room was established by what was then the Upper Sadong District Council. The reading room was on the banks of the Serian River on a site now occupied by the Heng Chong building. In 1969 the library moved into an annexe to the Council office. In 1984 the Library moved to its current location next to the Council office, occupying a new two storey building which cost RM271,000.00. This building was officially opened on 28 March 1985 by the then Minister of Local Government, the late Datuk Edward Jeli.

In 1994 the basement of this building was renovated and the Library now occupies three floors, with a total floor area of 301 square metres. The adult library and adult reference area are on the first floor, together with staff work areas. The public entrance, junior readers', newspaper, periodical and work areas are on the ground floor. In the basement are areas for young readers, junior reference and for computer access provided under Phase 5 of the Universal Service Provision programme.

Over the years the Council has extended its library services to various rural villages. In the 1970s there were only three village libraries, known in those days as reading rooms, at Tebakang, Tebedu and Bunan. In the 1980s three more village libraries opened: at Baki, Balai Ringin and Baru. In the next decade a further ten libraries were established – at Lebor, Pichin, Tae, Rayang, Paon Gahat, Sungai Menyan, Koran, Triboh, Engkeroh and Menaul. Federal funding enabled the construction of the libraries at Menaul and Triboh. Serian District Council Public Library now operates sixteen village libraries.

Tebakang Village Library has operated since December 1979 in a former Council clinic, and is close to schools, the new clinic, the Tebakang Bazaar and the Agriculture Office. It is easily accessible from Kampong Tebakang Melayu and Kampong Tebakang Dayak

Tebedu Village Library has operated in a former Council clinic since 1979, and is close to the Bazaar, the District Office, police station and the school.

Bunan Village Library was established in 1979 and until 1990 was known as Mongkos Village Library. This library also operates in a former clinic. It is strategically located within easy reach of Kampong Bunan Gega, Kampong Bunan Punok, Kampong Muara Ahi, Kampong Terbat Mawang, Kampong Terbat Leban, the Mission at Bunan, Bunan School, government offices and the clinic.

Baki Village Library was established in the 1980s and is still in its original location towards the end of the Old Bazaar. Balai Ringin Village Library has operated in a Council building at Balai Ringin Bazaar, close to the police station, since the 1980s.

Baru Village Library has been in existence since the 1980s and occupies a Council building in the bazaar on the Kuching to Serian Road.

Pichin Village Library is in a Council building on the Serian to Tebedu Road. It was officially opened in October 1990 by the Honourable Dato' Dr Haji Sulaiman bin Haji Daud, SIMP, PNBS, JBS, who was then Malaysian Justice Minister.

Taee Village Library is in a Council building on the Baki to Riih Road, next to the Balai Raya. It was officially opened in October 1990 by the Honourable Datuk Dr George Chan Hong Nam, KMN, PBS, ABS, who was then Special Minister assisting the Chief Minister of Sarawak, and is now the Deputy Chief Minister 1.

Lebor Village Library began operating in January 1990 in an extension to the Community Hall. This is now undergoing renovation, and the Library will relocate when remodelling of another building in the village is complete.

Rayang Village Library was established in a detached house which had been renovated by the community. It was opened by Serian District Council in October 1990.

Paon Gahat Village Library was established in a Council building in the centre of the village in January 1991.

Sungai Menyan Village Library was opened in a Council building on the Sri Aman to Serian Road in January 1991. It is situated next to the Sungai Menyan School.

Koran Village Library is on the Serian to Paon Rimu Road and was opened in January 1991.

Triboh Village Library began operations in July 1995 in an annexe to the community hall. The library was relocated to a private house three years later to allow for building works at the hall. In August 2000, a Federal Government grant of RM50,000.00 was made available through KASKA for the construction of a new village library. In early 2001 the library moved into its new building in Jalan Gedong, right at the heart of the village.

Engkeroh Village Library opened in October 1998 in an annexe to the Community Hall.

Menaul Village Library commenced operations in 1998 in a store belonging to a community member. It relocated briefly to the Menaul Mosque until the completion of its new building in March 2000.

In 2004 Serian District Council was unable to participate in Phase 1 of the Universal Service Provision (USP) programme, which brought advanced information and communications technology to many locations. Council was able to benefit from later Phases of this programme, which had been initiated by Kementerian Tenaga, Air dan Komunikasi (the Ministry of Energy, Water and Communications), in association with Pustaka Negeri Sarawak. Under Phase 2 the village libraries at Pichin and Tae were provided with personal computers, Internet access and associated equipment. Under Phase 3 the village libraries benefiting were at Menaul, Bunan and Paon Gahat. Phase 4 involved village libraries at Baru, Balai Ringin, Koran, Engkeroh, Sungai Menyan and Triboh. With the recent implementation of Phase 5, the main library in Serian and village libraries at Tebakang, Tebedu and Lebor were approved for inclusion. It was necessary to defer Lebor's participation because of the current lack of a permanent building for the library. As can be seen from the following table, the community has been making good use of the facilities provided under the USP.

Council agreed to implement the Perpustakaan Desa Siber Ilmu (PDSI) project (literally Cyber Science community library) at Rayang Village Library. This project began operations in October 2005 and library opening hours have now been extended to five hours per day. Intensive use has been made of the Internet and the computer-based productivity tools provided under this scheme. Target groups have ranged from primary and secondary school students to adults.

Simunjan District Council

Background History

The public library in Simunjan began in 1980 with a small facility which opened to the public for three hours per day. It occupied various premises until the construction of its own building in 1998, offering a larger collection and expanded accommodation for library users.

The District Council is also responsible for the branch library at Sebuyau and village libraries at Gedong, Kesindu, Lubuk Punggur and Sebang. All four village libraries have Internet access for the public provided under the Universal Service Provision programme.

Sri Aman District Council

Background History

The public library in Sri Aman was established in the 1960s by Batang Lupar District Council, the predecessor of Sri Aman District Council. Its first modest building was replaced with a new facility in Jalan Paya in 1980, which in turn was superseded by the present three-storey library in Jalan Council. Opened in 1998, this building houses Council meeting space on the top floor, with the library on the ground and first floors. The latest library is well equipped with information technology facilities, installed in 2002 with federal funding and the assistance of Pustaka Negeri Sarawak.

The Sri Aman District Council is also responsible for village libraries at Batu Lintang, Lingga and Pantu. The Batu Lintang, Undop Village Library commenced operations in 1988 in a local school. It has since relocated to renovated premises on the campus and is about to benefit from the provision of Internet access under Phase 5 of the USP programme.

The Lingga Village Library was established in 2004 and was equipped with computers with Internet access under Phase 3 of the USP programme in 2005. The village library at Pantu, which opened in 1999, is equipped with computers with Internet access provided under Phase 4 of the USP programme.

Saratok District Council

Background History

Saratok Public Library began operations in early 1960, when it was known as Kalaka Public Library. From 1970 to 1984 the library was housed in the Saratok District Council building. In June 1984 a new library building opened to the public, but by the 1990s demand had increased to such an extent that a larger and better equipped building was required. So in 1998 the current Saratok Public Library was constructed, a fully air-conditioned building with a reading area twice the size of its predecessor. Here library users, now numbering more than 2000, have access to a collection of over 46,000 items. Personal computers with network access were an instant success when they were installed in December 2005 and there are now eight Internet terminals.

Library users are assisted by eight staff who typically handle over 35,000 loan transactions, take hundreds of Internet bookings and provide reference and information services for 43,000 visitors each year. Children and teenagers are keen users of the Library, representing about half the registered members and accounting for well over half the visits and Internet bookings each year. The Saratok District Council is also responsible for branch libraries at Kabong and Roban, and a village library at Nyabor.

Saratok Public Library honours its frequent users. Mr Limping anak Junit, a Saratok resident and school teacher by profession, is one of the Library's most assiduous readers, borrowing around a hundred items each year, with a preference for fiction and history. He also makes good use of the reference collection when he visits the Library. Wendy Ong Hui Sang, a Form 3 student, borrows around sixty books in a typical year, keeping up with the latest Harry Potter novel when it comes out and making frequent use of the Library's reference collection and computers. Her examination results make her a good advertisement for regular library use.

The public library at Kabong, at the mouth of the Kerian River, began operations in 1994. It has a single staff member and a library membership of over two thousand. There are over 23,000 items in the collection, about a quarter of which are intended for junior members of the library. The library is equipped with two personal computers for the public, with Internet access.

Roban Public Library opened in 1991 in the local authority administration building. It has a single staff member and a library membership of about 600, with about equal numbers of adults and young people. The collection numbers some 15,000 items, about a quarter of which form the junior collection. Network access was provided in 2005 and in June 2006 two personal computers were provided for public access to the Internet. Nyabor Village Library opened in 1999. With one staff member, it has about 500 registered library members, with access to a collection of just under 4,000 items.

Dalat and Mukah

Background History

Mukah Public Library began operations in the Dalat and Mukah District Council office building in Jalan Kubu II in 1971. Three years later a library building was constructed in the old Mukah town centre, but in 1986 this building made way for a major redevelopment and occupied short-term premises until the completion of the current library building in 2002. The Library is managed by the Dalat and Mukah District Council. About 33,000 people visit the Library each year and have access to a collection of about 55,000 items. It is particularly popular with young students, one of whom has read a staggering 576 books in one year.

Dalat and Mukah District Council also operates a branch library at Dalat and village libraries at Balingian and Oya.

Sarikei District Council

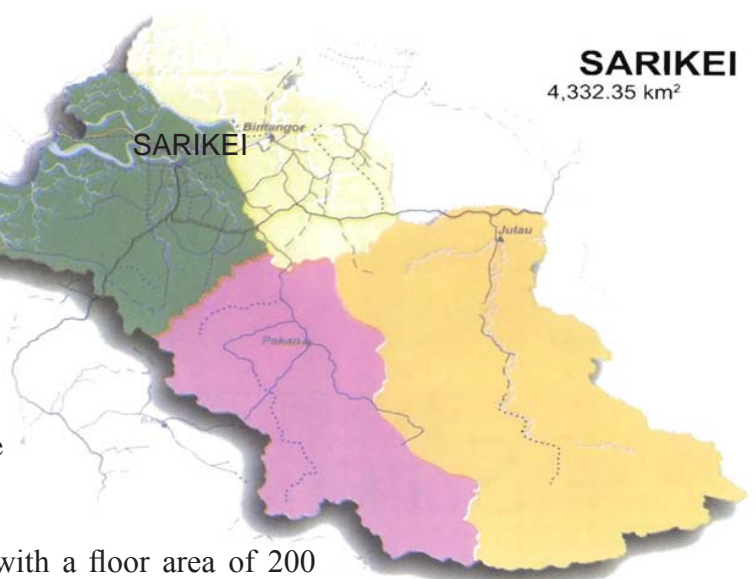

Background History

Sarikei Public Library began operations in the 1960s when it was housed in a wooden building in Jalan Getah. It consisted of a small reading room supervised by an attendant, with a few newspaper titles and no magazines at all. Books were provided by the then Sarawak State Library on bulk loan. There were no local funds available for the purchase of library books and the collection was very limited.

In October 1972, a new single storey building with a floor area of 200 square metres was built for the library in Lorong Layang-Layang near the Council offices. The new Sarikei District Council Library was declared open by the then Minister of Local Government, Encik Sim Kheng Hong and had a staff of two and a book stock of 6,902 items. In 1985 this building was extended, but demand was such that a further extension was needed in 1989. By 2002 the book stock had grown to 113,232 items. Not only was it popular with its users, but it was recognised for its superior service in the 2000 and 2002 awards of the Ministry of Environment and Public Health. Sustained high demand led the Council to construct a new library at Jalan Kapur, Sarikei, which opened in 2003.

The new library, which is managed by Sarikei District Council, has a floor area of approximately 2,000 sq metres and cost RM3.2 million to construct and equip. It is a striking two storey building surrounding a landscaped courtyard. The entrance wing contains an exhibition hall and a foyer which leads into the double-storey library proper. Here there is a spacious reading area, the lending section, the reference collection and staff offices. There is a children's section which includes an activity room. Other facilities include a hypermedia room, a multi purpose and discussion rooms, a Sarikeiana Collections Room and a senior citizens' corner. The entrance corridor is ramped to facilitate access for people with a disability.

One of the first District Council libraries to computerise using its own funding, the library uses the Angkasa Library Management System developed by Sarawak Information Systems (SAINS). This comprehensive system includes Online Public Access Catalogues (OPAC s), cataloguing, acquisition, membership and circulation modules, and has advanced features for clients, including online reservations.

The Sarikei Public Library was judged 'Best Library 2004' in the District Council category by the Ministry of Environment and Public Health, Sarawak (KASKA).

The District Council, with guidance from the Sarawak State Library, has also established libraries in rural areas. In 1981, the Council set up its first village library in Belawai in a converted clinic, with a part-time attendant to supervise the reading room. Three years later a new two storey building of about 90 square metres was constructed on this site, with the ground floor used by the library and the first floor as staff and visitor accommodation.

Jerijeh Village Library was established in 1991 and was temporarily housed under the mosque. In 1995, Council resolved to upgrade library services and provided a budget of RM70,000 for a permanent building, which was duly completed in the following year. A part-time attendant was appointed to supervise the library.

Paloh Village Library began operations in 1993 in a former school building, but in 1996 RM100,000 was allocated for a new building. The new library, under the care of a part-time attendant, opened to the public in 1998.

Rejang Village Library opened on 11 July 1994 in a former clinic owned by the Sarawak Woodchip Company and was jointly administered by the then Sarawak State Library, the District Council and the Company. Under this unique arrangement the Company made the building available and paid the power bills. The District Council provided newspapers, magazines, books and stationery and maintained the library building. The Sarawak State Library paid the salary of a part-time attendant and supplied bulk loans of books. Twice, in 1997 and in 1999, this library has won the award for Best Village Library.

The two-storey Jakar Library, constructed at a cost of about RM200,000, opened in 1993. The library, supervised by a part-time attendant, is on the ground floor, with staff quarters on the first floor. The building was fully air-conditioned in 2003. In 2006 this was one of the village libraries provided with upgraded network facilities and it was equipped with 6 Internet terminals provided by Pustaka Negeri Sarawak.

In May 2002, four of the village libraries - Belawai, Jerijeh, Paloh and Rejang - were transferred to the control of the Matu/Daro District Council as a result of a rearrangement of Divisional boundaries

The Sarikei District Council area is also served by a mobile library service. Launched in 1993 and operated by the Ministry of Environment and Public Health in collaboration with the Council, it provides library services to 39 primary schools in the Sarikei Division as well as operating in the Sibul and Betong Divisions.

Selalang Library, situated just next to the Mandor Aris school and the Selalang Market, was constructed at a cost of RM168,000 and opened to the public in 2004. It includes a separate air-conditioned room with four Internet computers for the public. The library is managed by a part-time attendant.

Sungai Pasi Village Library was built at a cost of RM137,000 and opened to the public in 2005. It too is managed by a part-time attendant.

Maradong & Julau District Council

Background History

The first Bintangor Public Library opened in 1974 in a new single storey building with a floor area of 400 square metres. There were two staff and a collection of about three thousand items. To meet growing demand, a new two-storey building was constructed for the library at a cost of RM1.4 million. It opened to the public in 1997, and now has a collection of over 75,000 items and attracts over 44,000 visits a year. The level of visits and loans is remarkable for a library with a membership of just over 1350 people.

The public library at Julau started life in 1997 in a wooden building and relocated to new premises in 1995. This too is a busy library, with over 45, 000 visits per year. Heavy use is made of the Internet terminals which were provided under the Universal Service Provision program. The Pakan Public Library commenced operations in 1985 and relocated to more spacious premises in the same building in 2006.

Village libraries managed by Maradong and Julau District Council are located at Sungai Tulai (established in 1988 as one of the initiatives of Reading Year), Muara Lebaan (1992), Sepena (1995) and Telak Batu (1995). Most of the village libraries are located close to schools and count students among their most active users.

Sibu & Kapit

DIVISION

Sibu Municipal Council

Background History

The Sibu Public Library can trace its origins to the Methodist Mission Library which was run by volunteers in the early 1950s. After the Council assumed responsibility for library services, the public library occupied a number of sites until the construction of the present library building in 1986 at a cost of RM2.4 million. It was at the time regarded as the most attractive library building in Sarawak and won a design award two years later. It won the best library award of the Library Division of the Ministry of Environment and Public Health in 2004.

The Municipal Council also operates branch libraries at Grand Height, Lanang and Sukun. There are also village libraries at Hilir and Bahagia Jaya Teku, both of which were Special Project libraries established under the national village library programme funded in the 2005 federal budget. The village libraries also have Internet access provided under the Universal Service Provision programme.

Sibu Rural District Council

Background History

The library needs of people living in the rural areas around Sibu is met by the Sibu Rural District Council's library service. There is a main library at Sibu Jaya, with smaller libraries at Durin and in the villages of Bawang Assan and Rantau Pajang. With a small but keen staff of nine, these libraries are all heavily used, especially by school students. Loan statistics show remarkably devoted readers young and old, and there is very extensive use of the Internet terminals which are provided at all sites.

Many special activities are organised by the library service each year, ranging from colouring and photographic competitions to creating banners for the local festival.

Bintulu Development Authority Public Library

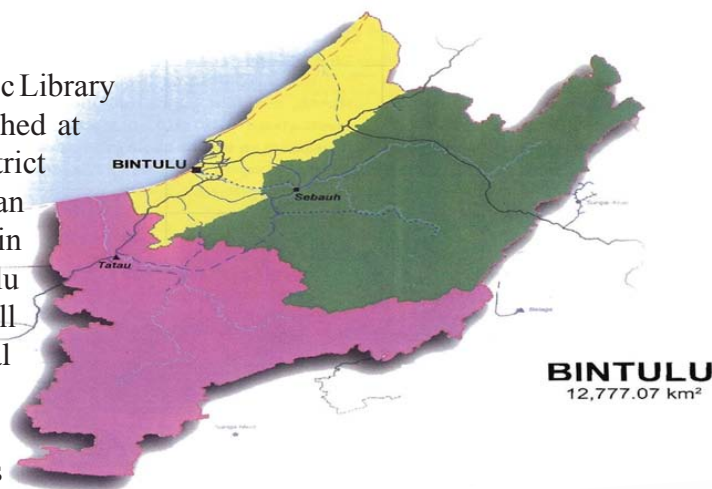

Background History

The Bintulu Development Authority (BDA) Public Library has its origins in a small reading room established at Kampung Sinong by the former Bintulu District Council. More sophisticated library services began in 1971 with the move to a wooden building in Jalan Green and a change of name to Bintulu Public Library. In those days Bintulu was a small town with a population of about 5000, so the total library collection was a modest 3000 items.

The discovery of major reserves of oil and gas in the region and the need to manage the rapid development of the town led to the establishment of the Bintulu Development Authority (BDA) in 1978. Two years later the BDA absorbed the Bintulu District Council, and with it took over responsibility for the Public Library. The local population increased markedly as Bintulu developed and the demand for library services rose to such an extent that new, larger premises were occupied in 1988. By the turn of the century this building too had been outgrown and a new library was built at Jalan Polycarp Sim Cheng Mung. This building offers much more extensive facilities for users and has an ultimate capacity of 300,000 items.

To meet the needs of the growing population in surrounding areas, branch libraries were established in the 1980s and 1990s. Sebauh Branch Library opened in 1981, replacing a small service point which had been in operation for two years. In 1988 a branch library began at Tatau. At Kidurong a branch library was installed on the first floor of a shophouse in 1991, relocating to a new and more suitable building in 1998

Miri Public Library

Background History

Miri Public Library has grown from very modest beginnings to become an outstanding community resource. When it was established in 1958 at the Community Hall, it had only one staff member and a few hundred books. It proved very popular, however, and in 1968 a new library was built at Setia Raja Road to cater for the rapidly growing demand. The new library opened with three staff and a collection of almost thirteen thousand items. Its membership was then 1,369, and in one year they borrowed an astonishing 38,140 items.

In mid-1989 the Library relocated to the Dewan Suarah, a more sophisticated and fully air-conditioned building. The improved accommodation breathed new life into the library service. Staff were able to raise the profile of the library, and public awareness and appreciation grew commensurately. Being in a more modern building also facilitated the introduction of more advanced library technology, culminating, in 2005, in the implementation of the integrated library management system, ANGKASA. Over the years Miri Public Library has won awards for the high number of loans issued, and has often topped the library league table for membership and budget allocation. Four years running, from 2000 to 2003, it won the 'Best Municipal Library in Sarawak' award.

Today the Library is as popular as ever, especially among children and students. In a special initiative for younger members, Miri Public Library established a Children's Club in April 2000. Its initial membership of 300 has today grown to 2,438 children, who enjoy a variety of activities at the Library. Committee members of the Club, including Library staff, kindergarten and primary school teachers, organise activities throughout the year, including a Children's Festival to celebrate Children's Day each September.

A branch library was established at Piasau Jaya estate in 1981 with two staff and an initial collection of 2,000 items. In its first year it had 423 registered members, issued 8,478 items and recorded 12,169 visitors. This library is very popular with students of nearby schools.

The branch library at Lutong was established in 1988 with two library assistants and a cleaner, 2,006 members and 1,711 items in its collection. In 1989, its first full year of operation, it issued over six thousand loans. Its building was donated by the resources company, Petronas, and the local authority funded its conversion into a library. The library was provided with advanced ICT facilities under the fourth Universal Service Provision programme and offers free Internet access to Library members as well as to students of nearby schools.

A branch library was opened in 2005 on a two acre site at the Taman Tunku Housing Estate, about 15 km from the centre of Miri. The estate's population is more than 10,000 and it has a shopping centre and three schools. Within a year of opening the library had enrolled 1,541 members and had issued almost 80,000 loans. Its popularity is growing steadily among the school students and residents of the area.

Limbang District Council

Background History

The first library in Limbang opened in 1974 on the first floor of the Limbang District Council building with one full-time and one part-time staff. The library opened six hours per day, six days a week, and small though it was, within a year it had a membership of over one thousand. It became increasingly busy and in 1979 additional staff were appointed.

In 1996 Council operations were relocated to make way for the construction of Limbang Plaza. Council occupied temporary quarters in Jalan Kubu, with the library on the ground floor. In 1998 Council, and with the Library, moved to the fourth floor of newly-completed Limbang Plaza. Here the Library occupies a floor area of over 400 square metres – more than twenty times the size of the first library – and opening hours have been extended. It is a strategic location for a library, as it is not only accessible to large numbers of the general public, but is within easy reach of the civil servants and others who work in the building. A popular facility, by the end of 2006 its membership had grown to over 20,000.

The Limbang District Council is also responsible for six libraries in rural areas: Batu Danau, Gadong, Long Napir, Mendamit, Pahlawan and Talanak. Three of these village libraries were part of the Universal Service Provision programme and have Internet access for the public.
